

March 25, 2020
POLSC 250 – International Relations

Instructions for tonight's class

Hey Folks,

Welcome to Week Two of the Corona Virus Protection Class! So far things seem to be going pretty good...I haven't received any panicked calls or emails. Everybody stay cool and we'll get through this thing. OK, so for tonight's class let's finish up our last theory of the nine – peace studies theory. After that, we'll talk for a few minutes about some online stuff to help you with your paper. It looks like we might need to turn it in electronically but I'll send out more information on that next week during break. For now, just keep up on the journal responses and the research paper and we'll see how things play out.

So for tonight people, here you go:

1) First click on the link for the reading "Why War Is Not Inevitable," by David Swanson. It's a pretty short article but very interesting. He could be understood as a classic peace studies theorist. Go ahead and do your journal response to this one, or pick another question if you like.

2) Next, click on the link for "Lecture Presentation" near the top section and watch the lecture.

3) Finally, click the links on the documentary videos "A Force More Powerful" and watch Episode One and Two. You can also do your journal response to this video if you choose.

All righty then, I'll be sending out information for you over the break on how we're going to handle the research paper. Keep your eye on the Covid-19 Updates near the top of our class page, and of course, take care and make sure to stay safe during the break. Keep practicing the social distancing!

Take care everybody!
Kropf
jkropf@dvc.edu