Study and discussion questions:

1. Discuss the concepts of proportional representation (in the essay by Amy) and instant run-off voting. Why do we not integrate these into our system of voting if it would make it more democratic?
2. Discuss which type of people vote and why. Do you feel that those who chose not to vote undermine democracy? What could be done to raise voting activity in underrepresented groups?
3. Discuss what Heineman describes as the “new style” of campaigning for election. Does “marketing: of candidates degrade the electoral process? How?
4. Would you call Heineman’s description of “throwing out ones’ vote” for a third party candidate a fair characterization of third-party voters? Do you think that this perpetuates people’s fears of voting for an alternative candidate?
5. Why does Sifry think it is a mistake to think that discouraged voters are apathetic about politics and therefore unreachable? What sorts of appeals might bring voters back to the polls?
6. In what ways does Lani Guinier see democracy being compromised by current electoral laws and practices in the United States?
7. William John Cox suggests that while “many...obstacles, such as property ownership and the racially-biased poll tax, have been removed, they are being replaced by voter identification (ID) laws and other voter suppression schemes designed to discourage and prevent many, otherwise eligible voters from participating in elections.” What examples does he cite and do you believe the problem is worse than in earlier periods?
