

Instructions for the May 15, 2023 Lecture

We made it...

Yup folks, this is our last night and last lecture. Probably fitting that global justice is our topic. Sorta spreads our whole discussion of political theory into a wider context. It's a lovely idea, but is it possible? I mean, if we still struggle to attain justice here in America, and we're less than 5% of the world's population, how can we achieve it on a world scale? I think the answer lies in not assuming that the way we understand justice is the only way to understand justice. Our conceit that only the West understands liberal concepts of justice, might be out of date. We don't have to be like other societies in order to learn from them. Just a thought....in any case, one more round of tasks, just to remember me by:

Lecture 15. Global Justice

Task 1: Read these instructions (sadly, for the last time, sniff sniff)

Task 2: Read Hoffman and Graham, Chapter 22, pp. 481 – 502.

Task 3: Click the link on my website or the Canvas “Modules” page titled “Lecture Fifteen Presentation” and watch the lecture for this evening. (I know you'll miss me....there's always Netflix!).

Task 4: Read the article for your journal response. You can find the question on the link titled “Lecture / Discussion Page” highlighted in yellow. After completing the response, you will have until the date posted on the assignments page to upload it to Canvas.

Task 5: Open the link for the video and watch.

Task 6: On the Canvas “Modules” page down to the link titled “Discussion Board: Lecture Fifteen.” Then answer the question that I have posted in approximately one to two paragraphs or so. Wait for other students to put their responses and then pick two students to respond to. The deadline for these responses will be posted on the Canvas assignments page. Don't be late....

I will tell you all it has been a great pleasure thinking and learning about political theory with each and every one of you. I wish lots of happiness, success, and hope that you'll continue this conversation that we've started with others. It's our last and only hope, right?

Safe travels everyone!

Kropf

