

Instructions for the April 20, 2022 Lecture

Hola Comrades?

All right so the papers are going up tonight, you'll load them up on Canvas onto something called Turnitin. I'll check out your papers this weekend, make any adjustments (which you'll be able to see by clicking on the little blue bubbles throughout the paper), and then you've got a few weeks to fix everything and then put it up one more time on May 18th, our last night. Remember, your final paper grade will go down if you don't fix everything so make sure you do. Make sure you've done a good job of editing. There's nothing professors (and grad student readers) at the university hate more than papers with spelling / grammar errors, sloppy data analysis, or technical citation and formatting mistakes. Make sure you edit, edit, edit. Each time you do, I swear you'll find something wrong that needs to be fixed. I want your best possible score for the first draft.

So, as I mentioned last class, we're dividing up globalization into two parts, North and South, to get a better perspective on this very complicated topic. Tonight, we'll survey how the South looks at the prospects of globalization, as you can imagine, they see it a little differently.

Lecture 12. International Political Economy and Globalization – The South

Task 1: Read these instructions.

Task 2: Read text “Global Imperialism and the Great Crisis: The Uncertain Future of Capitalism” by Ernesto Screpanti. Long and detailed but you should read deeply and critically on this one. It will be worth your time.

Task 3: Watch the lecture presentation on “International Political Economy and Globalization – The South.” I will thrill you with my technical filmmaking skills.

Task 4: Read the article for your journal response. You can find the question on the link titled “Lecture / Discussion Page” highlighted in yellow. After completing the response, you will have until the date posted on the assignments page on Canvas to upload.

Task 5: Open the link for the video and watch How the World Runs on Looting the Congo. This one is much more critical of economic globalization. There are lots of films out there on globalization...so check 'em out!

Task 6: Click the link titled “Discussion Board Question and Peer Responses for Video Presentation” and answer the question that I have posted in approximately one to two paragraphs or so. You know the rest of the drill....

OK, once again, let's try to maximize our score on the first draft of the paper which is due tonight so you can smoke out that final paper. I'll be available through email if you have any questions. Peace out kiddies!.....

Kropf
