

Instructions for Lecture Thirteen

Good Evening Everyone!

Continuing our examination of political economy and policy, this week we'll look at life in the global south. Last week we discussed where and when the state intervenes in market activity, why is it usually the case that wealthier countries are so against state intervention in the global south? Can countries which are relatively poor compared with their northern counterparts develop without significant intervention from the state? And how does development work within the context of globalization? These questions and others will be addressed this week.

Lecture 13. Political Economy of Development

Task 1: Read these instructions! (please, I beg you....).

Task 2: Read Chapter 11 in the Orvis/Drogus text (pp. 350 – 378)

Task 3: Watch the lecture presentation on “Political Economy of Development.”

Task 4: Read the article for your journal response. You can find the question on the link titled “Lecture / Discussion Page” highlighted in yellow. After completing the response, you will have until the date posted on the assignments page to upload it to Canvas.

Task 5: Open the link for the video and watch.

Task 6: Go to our Canvas page and click the link titled “Discussion Board for Lecture One” and answer the question that I have posted in approximately one to two-paragraphs. Wait for other students to put their responses and then pick two students to respond to. The deadline for these responses will be posted on the Canvas assignments page. Don't be late....

So the paper is due tonight and I'll begin working on them right away. Should be a two to three-week project, but everyone will have plenty of time to make any adjustments before the final turn in.

We're getting close people, almost done...
