

Instructions for Lecture Fifteen

Hey People!

Well, we made it to the end. One more lecture this week and we'll be ready for a well-earned summer break. We're back to the Weatherby text to look at one more very important region of the world; the Middle East and North Africa. If you've been watching any news over the past decade, you already know how deeply the west is invested in this part of the world. Oil? Yes of course, but there's a lot more at stake from a geopolitical/economic standpoint than just that one important mineral. What will the future hold for this part of the world? We'll dig in this week and start wrapping things up....

Lecture 15. Other World Regions: The Middle East and North Africa

Task 1: Read these instructions! (I know you'll miss this part...).

Task 2: Read Chapter 8 in the Weatherby text (pp. 309 – 370)

Task 3: Watch the lecture presentation on “Other World Regions: The Middle East and North Africa.” Will you watch? No one will ever know (but you).

Task 4: Read the article for your journal response. You can find the question on the link titled “Lecture / Discussion Page” highlighted in yellow. After completing the response, you will have until the date posted on the assignments page to upload it to Canvas.

Task 5: Open the link for the video and watch.

Task 6: Go to our Canvas page and click the link titled “Discussion Board for Lecture One” and answer the question that I have posted in approximately one to two-paragraphs. Wait for other students to put their responses and then pick two students to respond to. The deadline for these responses will be posted on the Canvas assignments page. Don't be late....

Thanks to everyone for all the hard work you put in this semester. If you have any final questions about the paper, the course, or anything else, let me know next week on our last Zoom meeting. Again, thanks to all for a great semester!

Wishing everyone the best,

Kropf
